Technology, Communications and Digital

Cristina Mesa is a partner in Garrigues' Intellectual Property Department and specializes in digital law, electronic commerce, advertising and consumer affairs. She handles both the management of complex lawsuits and also provides advice on contracts and the strategic management of intellectual property rights. She has extensive experience in advising trendsetting technology companies. She has been singled out by Chambers & Partners, Legal 500 and IP Stars (Managing IP). Cristina holds an LL.M. in International Business and Trade Law (Magna Cum Laude) from Washington College of Law and a Law Degree and a Political Science and Public Administration Degree from Universidad Carlos III in Madrid. She is also admitted to practice law in New York State.

At Garrigues, Cristina also coordinates the fashion and luxury business line, providing integral advice to businesses in the industry. In 2015, she launched the first program in Spain on fashion law and currently coordinates the legal modules of the specialized programs offered at Centro de Estudios Garrigues.

Experience

Cristina Mesa joined Garrigues in 2008 and has been a partner in the firm's Intellectual Property Department since 2021. She practices in the areas of intellectual property law, e-commerce, consumer affairs, advertising, unfair competition, AI, freedom of expression and information and web3 environments. She also advises businesses in the retail and fashion industries. Cristina oversees complex lawsuits and provides ongoing advice on contracts and strategy.

Over the course of her professional career, she has participated in extremely complex lawsuits, including:

- Legal proceedings in connection with the infringement of intellectual property rights (e.g. software, sui generis rights in data bases and 3D printing), industrial property (including pan-European trademark actions, registered and unregistered industrial designs and patent infringement), unfair competition (acts contrary to good faith, misleading acts, taking advantage of third parties' contractual infringement,) and breach of trade secrets.

- E-commerce lawsuits related to consumer legislation (class-actions), with particular emphasis on the supply of digital content and the management of marketplaces, the liability of digital providers (including platforms and search engines) and mediation in relation to the P2B2C Regulation.
- Lawsuits regarding the defense of freedom of expression and information and the right to honor, privacy and one's own image.

She also provides recurring advice on contracts and participates on an ongoing basis in M&A deals involving intellectual property aspects:

- Ongoing advice on contracts, including licenses, assignments, franchises and agency agreements, focusing in particular on selective distribution networks.
- M&A deals focusing on innovation and technology, including due diligence processes and regularization of pre- and post-closing contingencies.
- Adaptation and localization of digital businesses, including compliance with legislation on e-commerce (LSSI), consumer affairs (LGDCU) and liability (DSA, P2B2C).
- Advice on the implementation of disruptive businesses in web3 environments, including the use of algorithms, AI, virtual and increased reality, 3D printing and tokenization of NFTs.

Finally, Cristina has extensive experience in providing strategic advice in relation to the management of intellectual property rights and new technologies, supported by the experts at Garrigues Industrial and Intellectual Property Agency.
