Tax

Marcia holds a Degree in Law, specializing in Constitutional Protection Law, from Universidad Panamericana, Mexico City Campus. Since 2019, she has pursued her professional career in tax litigation, participating in the defense of taxpayers against acts by the tax authorities. Her professional practice includes the preparation of legal defenses, the analysis of administrative rulings and representing clients before the competent authorities and courts. She has a solid knowledge of tax law, constitutional law, litigation and administrative law, focusing on constitutional protection ("amparo") lawsuits as a tool for the protection of rights. Her training and experience have enabled her to develop a strategic vision in the solution of tax disputes, as well as skills in the areas of critical analysis, legal arguments and the drafting of complex documents. She is committed to professional ethics and has worked in highly-demanding technical environments. She is fluent in English and Spanish.
